REPUBLICANS ARE LOYAL TO THE PARTY IN BIG RATIFICATION RALLY

A young man who was willing to take up the standard of his party and beat it on and up to victory. This shows that the people are intent upon advancing Mr. Andrews' proposal. This indicates that the people realize that they must follow President Roosevelt, in working for the development of the Territory along American lines. The Republican party has stood for Americanism for many years—not the Americanism of a cheap charlatan, but the Americanism that has brought America out of the throes of a great war forty years ago to become what we believe to be the greatest nation in the world. Do not go into the party whose face is toward the sunset, but stand for the party whose future means the prosperity of the nation and the highest development of these islands. Let us go into this work with a determination that we shall win.

All the People.
Mr. Robertson, in introducing the next speaker, said it was a mistaken idea that the Republican party was a party for the white man and that the Home Rule party was the party for the natives. The Republicans numbered among them some of the most intellectual and wealthy of the Hawaiian people. Mr. Kane, who would now address them, was a worthy representative of his race.

S. K. Kane spoke of the devotion of the people to their public interests as illustrated by their attendance at meetings without regard to pain and mud that prevailed during the campaign. He asked why the Home Rulers had passed over the two Princes, also representative Hawaiians like Li-Ikalanui and Bush, to choose for their candidate a man who had not even registered as a voter and was disqualified to sit in the Legislature. The Republicans had chosen a young man, reared and educated among them.

New Blood.
Abraham Lewis was introduced as an able public speaker and esteemed member of society. Here had been here but a short time and represented the new blood which was hoped to greatly increase the strength of the Republican party at every succeeding registration.

Mr. Lewis said that it was well for the men of the party to get together and consult over the victory, for they could thus talk of the results of such a success. The victory showed that there was not a distinction of race or color, of affiliation or class; all were represented in the throng which gathered to express their joy over the verdict of the ballots. The people know that the Republican party is the one which will work. It is the party which will not fritter away its time, but will legislate wisely and well. The election, too, shows the rising influence of the young men. On the Mainland everywhere the young men are coming to the front. In the late war when father and son went from the bench and desk and field to the battle fields our young President was found with a regiment of young men about him, men from the university and the range, and their blood is sprinkled over the battlefields and the pages of history for all time. When San Francisco wanted a new charter, it elected a young man for Mayor, who saw the business through creditably. This community needed young men of good, rich, red blood. Who was more fitted to represent the people than a young man educated in their schools? The election of Mr. Harris showed that when the Republican party worked together it could win. It was a straw that showed how the Republican could win the general election in the fall. It showed that the community realized the importance of being in sympathy with the Administration at Washington. The Territory wants money for its harbors and other public works. Mr. Lewis referred to the Pacific as the scene of America's future battles, both martial and commercial. By our holding up the Republican party's banner here, they at Washington would see that Hawaii was making itself worthy of being placed as a star in the firmament of that glorious flag.

Bad Home Rule Policy.
Representative Jonah Kumalae received an enthusiastic greeting. He compared the victory of Harris with that of David over Goliath. In the last Legislature the Home Rulers had every opportunity to carry out their platform and had failed when they had been the chance to act. The Republicans had no chance, but every good thing they had suggested had been killed by the Home Rulers. Let the Republicans have a majority in the next Legislature and the people would find that they had good government assured. He urged the people to believe what they read in the Hawaiian press, as the only purpose of those papers was to keep alive hatred of the native. The time had come when the people should accept the Republican party and the occasion was the present time. He said the people should not be led away by the man who bragged that he had proposed a governing bill, for had that bill passed, its result would have been the ruin of families and the bringing of poverty to many homes. He hoped that every one would be a Republican.

Fifth District Helped.
The chairman pointed with pride to the assistance received from leaders in the Fifth District. Let him introduce, as one of these helpers, T. McCants Stewart.

Mr. Stewart began by repeating the old saying of Lincoln, that you may fool all the people some of the time, some of the people all the time, but you cannot fool all the people all the time. He referred to the history of the Hawaiian race and the character of the kings, and said that he had prophesied that the result of the election would depend upon whether the people could be fooled into voting for a man who could not sit. He said many people had voted for Wilcox because they had been promised that if elected the monarchy would be restored, but the people found themselves fooled. Again Wilcox had said that if elected to Congress he would come back as Governor, yet there was a chance that Dole might be removed if it was certain that his successor would not be a Home Ruler, and again the people were fooled. He said that he thought Wilcox would come back and tell the people that the only thing they could do was to affiliate with the Republican party, which was the party of progress. If Governor Dole should remain in office, he said, it would be the duty of all to support him, to ignore Doleism and anti-Doleism, and all stand on a platform of Republicanism.

The speaker caused much laughter in his good telling of a foreboding yarn about a parrot trained aboard ship and afterward coming into possession of a clergyman. As the new owner had just carried out his threat of ducking the bird in a pail of water for naughty language, he was utterly confounded by the remark of the parrot on shaking its plumage, "Where in the devil were you when the cyclone struck us?" The point of course was the painful Home Rule surprise of Wednesday evening. Mr. Stewart spoke of the comprehensive liberality of the Fourth District Republican organization. Although it had been accused of being inimical to the Territorial administration, it had presented as one of the speakers that evening Mr. Lewis, law partner of W. O. Smith, one of the men nearest to Governor Dole. They had also listened to Mr. Andrews, attorney for the Advertiser, and now they were being addressed by one whose name the Advertiser seldom deigned to mention in its news of events wherein he had a part. Next fall a united Republican party would send a Delegate to Washington and would ensure the inauguration of a complete system of municipal government. (Applause.) Here tonight were the brown man and the white man and a colored man commingling with them. The Republican party had no color, so that they could make a beautiful bouquet. (Laughter.) Let them make up that beautiful bouquet and the day would come when not only the nation but the whole world would see in these fair islands what Lincoln called "government of the people, by the people and for the people."

Not All Lawyers.
Mr. Robertson said they must not have the idea that the party had nothing but lawyers, after listening to Dole's attorney by proxy, and the Advertiser's attorney and the attorney whose name the Advertiser usually printed in white ink. (Laughter.) He desired to introduce a man who could sling a bag of sugar as easily as the lawyers could shake a leg.

William Olanu, the silver-tongued stevedore, was loudly cheered on responding to the foregoing introduction. He said that it had been alleged by the Home Rulers that the Republican party was the missionary party. This was not true, as every one knew Olanu and knew that he was not a missionary. The title was made up only by the Home Rulers to deceive the voters, that they might gain their own ends. He compared the case of the people following the Home Rulers to the blind leading the blind, and said that they would all fall into the ditch, after a while. He complimented the Republicans on taking one of their young men and making him a candidate and electing him, and said this was just what the Home Rulers did not do. As to the last Legislature he said it was run on the plan of getting all that could be had, and then certain members would go off and play the fa. The Republican party was the party of all classes, its doors were not closed to any one.

Thanks of Organization.
District Chairman Gear closed the meeting with a few words. He said on behalf of the Fourth District Committee, he wanted to thank the workers who had freely given their time to the work of doing what they could to bring about the result. The Democrats who had seen the error of their ways, the Home Rulers who had turned to the light and finally to the rank and file of the Republican party, he tendered the thanks of the committee for the victory they had made possible. Finally he proposed three cheers for Representative W. W. Harris, who's forthwith resounded through the town.

The management of the meeting was in the hands of C. B. Wilson, chairman of the committee which has arranged all the meetings of the campaign.

Albany, N. Y., March 30.—The quarterly bulletin of the New York State Department of Labor shows that for the last quarter ending January 1, 1902, the decreased illness in building, clothing and baking trades was noticeable. A table shows that in 1901 50,253 members of labor unions gained a weekly addition to their wages of $86,807, which is equivalent to an advance of $1.73 each per week. The large scale system of pensions for superannuated employees in the State has been estimated by the Metropolitan Street Railway of New York city. At the age of 70 years employees will be retired on pensions. Those who have been in the service of the company twenty-five years receive 25 per cent of their wages, and for thirty-five years' service a pension amounting to 40 per cent of wages.

Immigration at the port of New York has been increasing rapidly. The number of arrivals in the fourth quarter of 1901 was 93,628, as compared with 74,322 one year ago.
